Having examined the New Patent Shaft Coupling invented by H. B. Hoagland we feel pleasure in informing the public that [illegible] is the safest and best method of connecting shafts or tongues to a vehicle that has ever been used.

It fastens without bolt or screw and is therefore easily and speedily separated. It rests on Gutta Percha so as to be entirely free from the rattling sound which so often disturbs restless horses. It is easily changed so that the shafts or tongue may be detached in an instant and is convenient safe and secure.

It is easy to change this style of coupling any buggy or other vehicle now in use, and with small expense. We have come to the conclusion to use this new invention ourselves [illegible] in all cases. We [illegible] Patent [illegible] for to [illegible] the best [illegible] use

EASTERN DATES TO MAY 26.

Washington News

WASHINGTON May 25—In the Senate the Conference report on the Fifteenth Amendment bill was adopted by a party vote.

The Committee on postal telegraph have agreed not to ask for action by the House at this session.

The Great Fenian Raid—Sharp Skirmishing on Canadian Soil—Excitement on the Border

NEW YORK May 25—The Canadian news causes quite a sensation. Eight thousand men are represented to have left here and as many more have since enlisted. Rumor says that [illegible] is to take command and also that several hundred United States troops have started for the border.

A telegram from St. Albans states that the Fenians entered Canada from Franklin Vermont and attacked Frelighsburg and defeated the Canadian militia in a skirmish, with a loss of several killed and wounded.

BOSTON May 25—Reports at headquarters state that the advanced guard occupied Pigeon Hill with sixteen rifles falling back without firing a gun.

The Grand Trunk railroad is torn up for quite a distance to capture a cattle train.

OGDENSBURG May 25—Five hundred Fenians and a hundred wagons of ammunition passed through Massena last night. Four hundred more are at Watertown and a number at St. Albans estimated at from 1,000 to 1,500. Col. Mosby Confederate guerrilla is there organizing a cavalry force.

MONTREAL May 25—The Fenians are at Trout River Huntingdon county and intend to cross. Six hundred volunteers left for the front. The sixty-ninth regiment is expected from Quebec. The Fenians at Pigeon Hill number 3,000 and are throwing up entrenchments. The Prince Consort's own rifles have gone to the front with Montreal volunteers to attack them. Prince Arthur goes on Col. Russell's staff. A battery of artillery has gone to the front. All other troops in the city are ready to move. It is thought that the military authorities will not attempt to check the invaders near the border but allow them to come some distance into the country to get a good chance at them.

Capture of Gen. O'Neil by U. S. Authorities.

TORONTO, May 26—News has been received that O'Neil was arrested by the United States authorities and is now lodged at St. Albans. The Fenians attacked the Home Guards at Cook's Corners but were repulsed with several killed and wounded. No lives were lost on the Canadian side.

ST. ALBANS May 25—The Fenians crossed the border at noon to-day under command of Gen. O'Neil and were soon after surprised by a volley from Canadians concealed beside the road. The fire was returned and sharp discharges were kept up for some time. One Fenian was killed and one wounded. United States Marshal Foster and his Deputy witnessed the skirmish and soon afterward when O'Neil had gone to the right of his command arrested him notwithstanding his refusal to surrender and brought him in a carriage to this place. He was taken before the United States Commissioner for violation of the neutrality laws and in default of $20,000 bail was committed to Burlington jail.

The arrest of O'Neil has fallen like a wet blanket on the Fenians and reports from the front to-night say they are badly demoralized. The Fenians fought well, but evidently were not reinforced as expected. There are not over 500 men about the scene of this skirmish while ammunition for four times that number had been provided. The report is that many are returning to St. Albans. About 120 arrived from the South to-night. Unless heavily reinforced their movements will be a failure.

Later information says two Fenians were killed and two wounded. One of the former is Lieut. Murray of a Boston company. Some U. S. artillery has arrived here from Plattsburg. More expected to-morrow. It is rumored that Gen. Meade will soon be here. The streets are lively to-night.

It is reported that several companies of British regulars are on their way to the front. Great excitement prevails all along the border.

ROCHESTER May 25—Three car loads of Fenians passed here for the East to-night. It is reported that large numbers go to-morrow.

MONTREAL May 25—Advices from the front say the Fenians attacked an outpost at Frelighsburg and were repulsed with one killed and twelve wounded and missing. Canadians lost none. The Fenians are falling back. Between two and three hundred left Portland this morning. The United States authorities seized 27 packages of arms at [illegible] The Canadian volunteers are ready to receive the Fenians at Trout River.

PROVIDENCE May 25—A company of artillery at Newport is ordered to be ready to move.

POUGHKEEPSIE May 25—U. S. batteries bound for Ogdensburg passed here to-night. The Fenian Generals Gleason and Davis have also gone North.

UTAH TERRITORY

CORINNE, May 25—A dispatch from Laramie City Wyoming states that the Big Horn expedition reached that place this evening and will remain for a day or so to lay in supplies for their journey and arrange to make Laramie a base for their supplies it being the nearest and best point for that purpose.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26—Assemblyman Rockwell is out in a card defending his action and attacking that of the Mayor and Supervisors on the matter of Donohue & Creighton's claim.

There have been nearly 150 orders received many of them by telegraph for ticket 1849 in the Mercantile Library Lottery and one enthusiastic individual offers $50 bonus for it. The agents are registering names with orders for numbers of tickets as they come in and 1849 was among the first called for.

Senator Morrill on the Tariff

[From the Washington Chronicle May 12.]

On Monday, in the Senate occurred the extended and important speech of Mr. Morrill of Vermont on the subject of the tariff. It is well understood that this subject is a speciality with Mr. Morrill and that he has made it a matter of long and careful study while his late speech bears ample evidence that he has investigated the two great policies of protection and free trade in [illegible] immediate and more remote bearings [illegible] the industry and general prosperity of the country.

In the introduction of his speech he enunciates the three great doctrines as held and advocated by the two classes into which the public is divided on the subject of the tariff. The capital purpose of any tariff is the financial support of Government. To secure such support means must of course come from some source, otherwise there is no way for keeping in motion during a single day the wheels of Government or of any single department thereof. So plain a matter is this that it would seem a child could not fail to understand it.

Mr. Morrill lays down the general doctrines generally received as follows:

First—A tariff for revenue, with discriminations for the protection of American industry.

Second—Free trade absolute.

Third—A tariff for revenue solely and showing no more favor to American interests than to those of any other country.

He then remarks upon the first doctrine and policy that practically it is the extremest point asked for by the advocates of protection. In the matter of revenue, the great public are agreed—even the most devoted supporters of free trade and it is difficult to see how any person could dissent. It is the matter of "discriminations for the protection of American industry" that forms the ground of opposition, and this is the great bone of contention.

Now in respect to absolute "free trade" this, it must be acknowledged has a certain fascinating sound. There seems a smack of nobleness, liberty and equity about it. At the same time it is doubtless a chimera and an impossibility, certainly so in a Government such as ours. Hence Mr. Morrill charges its advocates with commending without intending to adopt it just as men often extol a beautiful woman whom however they would be very slow to wed. Thus the Senator asserts boldly that free trade has never been anywhere, at any time more than a theory. The absolute application of the doctrine among civilized nations has never been witnessed, although it holds an unchallenged empire in nearly all of our colleges and in most of our leading newspapers of commercial cities, and practically nowhere else except in the wigwams of savages." He adds that no nation has built up itself on any other doctrine than that of protection and that no nation dares venture upon trying the experiment of absolute free trade. So far as Great Britain has thus partially experimented, her interests have been damaged rather than promoted. Mr. Morrill shows that the nation attained its highest point of prosperity and power under the rigid enforcement of the principle of protection. This he illustrates, in part by the fact that in 1846 the last year of protection the British treasury showed an excess over expenditures of $19,000,000 while in 1868-9 under the free trade policy it showed a deficit of $14,000,000. He reminds us also that under the protection policy, agriculture had doubled the produce of the land, while at present other nations are snatching from her every unprotected article while pauperism, both in city and country, is largely on the increase and insanity and intemperance show an advance more frightful still and he pronounces the British experiment of free trade a painful and humiliating failure.

Then further as to free trade were this policy adopted what is to become of the revenue? Revenue there must be, as we have seen, the movements of Government are at once and effectually arrested. Hence as Senator Morrill well observes the advocates of the free trade policy "studiously conceal the fact that direct taxes on land, on [illegible], and taxes on incomes tread on the heels of free trade and would become if that were to prevail the only source of revenue." All this means that when free trade becomes the policy of this country the arrest of indirect taxation will be followed at once by direct taxes and that to a very burdensome extent for the support of the National Government, and how such an unwelcome result can be avoided and the Government survive, it certainly becomes every free trade theorist to explain clearly and fully. "It is clear," says Senator Morrill, "that our revenue must be raised chiefly in levying foreign importations or by the system of internal and direct taxation. Internal taxes are very efficient when briefly resorted to in an overwhelming emergency; but for ordinary use our late experience of of their onerous character will not be likely to lead to their permanent retention and whenever the revenue can be safely relinquished, the major part of such taxes will be quickly abandoned."

So much for the second, or free-trade theory.

Then as to the third policy—that of tariff for revenue solely, or what is lately termed "Revenue Reform." Mr. Morrill characterizes this as a policy that "disregards all the interests of labor and all investments of American capital. It merely takes care of the Government, and ignores the general welfare."

Mr. Morrill insists that this is not sufficient. We understand him to argue that two things are necessary as well as eminently just and proper: first, that there is sufficient revenue derived from foreign importations to meet the liabilities of the Government, and secondly, that in the levying of duties upon imported products a proper discrimination should be made in favor of certain branches of home industry as a protection greater or less against foreign competition. "A tariff for protection," he remarks "is one that levies duties upon articles which to some extent are or can be produced at home, and which it is desirable a larger measure to have produced at home. Home labor is thus protected and encouraged. A tariff for protection as well as revenue makes a discrimination in favor of our people against all strangers and sometimes imposes a higher rate because it may be necessary to shield some young and struggling industry from the merciless competition of the world at large."

Such are the principles. And in the advocacy of a protective tariff as well as for mere revenue Senator Morrill presents a masterly argument accompanied with pertinent and extended illustrations constituting a speech worthy the Senate of the United States and which should be scattered broadcast over the entire country.

SECRETARY BELKNAP'S WAR AGAINST THE MULES.—Our new Secretary of War General Belknap proved that he was not to be a mere lay figure in the Cabinet a few days after he took the oath of office. He has overhauled army matters generally and has brought to bear in several reforms his experience as a soldier and his knowledge of the Western country where our army is mostly stationed.

Among other discoveries which he has lately made is that there are no less than 15,000 mules in the supposed service of the Quartermaster's Department, most of whom are engaged wholly in the business of eating their heads off. The Quartermaster General protested that all of this army of the long eared was required for present or expected duty but General Belknap failed to see it and will forthwith order the sale of five thousand of Gen. Meigs' pets.

The report of the Statistical Division of the Department of Agriculture issued a few days since gives most unfavorable accounts of the wheat prospects in the Western States. Although [illegible] spring weather has given farmers encouragement the prospects are by no means flattering. Wheat [illegible] over the [illegible] once [illegible] enough to bear [illegible] the west would and [illegible] market [illegible] A partial failure of western [illegible] the supply that would [illegible] the result would be beneficial [illegible] farmers obtaining a better price [illegible] their wheat.

It is estimated that the principal business of many of the gentlemen Cubans who have been [illegible] residing in New York since the insurrection broke out in their native island has been to get married to American girls in good pecuniary circumstances.

American Shipping.

[From the Boston Advertiser May 12.]

After a long delay Mr. Lynch from the committee on navigation interests has got his two bills fairly before the House and has presented in a forcible speech which we print elsewhere the reasons on which they rest. Difficult as it has hitherto been to get the Government or the country to consider any practicable measure for the relief of our sea-going interests there is no other cause of a business nature now before the public with equal claims to support. It is hardly ten years since we took pride in competing with all commercial nations in American ships manned by American seamen familiar with all the waters of the globe and carrying their full share of the merchandise which all nations had to exchange with one another. Gradually this power slipped away partly through the substitution of iron for wood which put us at temporary disadvantage partly through an inadequate appreciation of the requirements of commerce in making our revenue laws partly through the adoption of a vicious currency unrecognized by other nations and badly depreciated at home and partly through the treachery of a rival nation in striking a foul blow when we were not in a position to ward it off or resent it.

These difficulties are gradually losing their force. We have inexhaustible supplies of iron, superior for purposes of ship building to English iron, which can be brought into use whenever suitable inducements are offered. The revenue laws are open to amendment as the commercial exigencies of the country require, the currency, though not where it should be, is vastly more manageable than it has been and its present condition does not account for the great difference in the commercial power of this and other nations and the advantage gained by Great Britain France and Germany during the war, is by no means proof against a prosperous and successful rivalry. But years are rolling rapidly by, and it still remains a question whether we have the faith and the enterprise to use the means by which alone a successful rivalry can be established.

The committee having this subject in hand have done their best to solve the problem. The first of the bills under consideration provides for the remission to the builder of steam or sail vessels in the United States of an amount equal to the duties on the imported materials used in their construction. This is the standing policy of other commercial nations. In order to encourage the use of American materials the bill also provides for payment to the builder using domestic materials of an amount equivalent to the duties on similar articles of foreign production. It is further proposed to allow American ships engaged in foreign trade to take their ship stores out of bond free of duty, and to relieve them of some of the local taxes harbor dues, pilotage fees, and others of a questionable nature. After all, the American builder will still have to contend with vessels built in the first place on a specie basis, with labor at a low price with materials near at hand, and sailing—steam vessels at least—under protection of enormous subsidies such as have never been thought of on this side of the Atlantic. To meet these disadvantages in part, the bill provides a small annual subsidy on all American built vessels in the foreign trade. Mr. Washburn's bill, which it is understood the committee have agreed to support provides for direct subsidies to six new steamship lines. For the rest we should have to trust to the superior skill of American workmen and to the superior character of our seamen to enable American vessels to compete once more for the general business of the world.

In regard to particular routes Mr. Lynch has evidently put himself in sympathy with the ambitious project of the Mediterranean and Oriental Steamship Company for opening communication and trade with the south of Europe and the extreme East. While we may agree that advantages worth striving for are to be secured by taking early possession of that tempting route, we are very far from agreeing with the admission that it is unwise to compete for ocean routes to the north of Europe. Our people will be slow to admit that they have been permanently displaced from the great routes of ocean traffic to which they have contributed and expect to contribute hereafter so large a portion of the merchandise which crosses the sea.

Small Fruits for Farmers.

The following sensible suggestions, which we find in Hearth and Home for May 7th, appeal with especial force to the farmers of our vicinity. We quote:

Disagreeable as it may sometimes be to tell the truth, still it should be told if for no other purpose than to make certain persons do their duty. At least two thirds of our farmers supply their families with only the coarsest kinds of food, such as potatoes, pork and bread. The little children eat bread and milk until their stomachs get sufficiently strong to digest pork and beans, with an occasional lump of beef and mutton for a change. Now, we hold that if there is any one thing that will make a child linger, either in person or memory, near the old homestead, it is the good and wholesome meals provided by 'mother.' Does not every farmer and farmer's wife know and feel that this is truth? Then why do you not strive to supply your table with all the luxuries that the climate will permit of producing.

Children are particularly fond of fruit and it is the healthiest of all food, and yet it is almost a rarity to find it in abundance upon the tables even of the wealthiest farmers. Perhaps your table is well supplied with pies, cakes and preserves when company is present, but such occasion or eatables are not in the list we recommend for it is the every day meal that brings pleasant reflections that will long be remembered.

If your purse is light, and the garden barren of small fruits begin now with the following which will not cost more than an extra pair of boots which you can do without much better than your family can fruit:

25 Philadelphia raspberries, 25 Doolittle raspberries 25 red currants, 25 white currants 25 gooseberries 25 Kittatinny blackberries, 100 Wilson strawberry plants, 5 Concord grape vines.

The above plants can be delivered anywhere in the United States and when a man lives near a nursery perhaps for a less sum. This number of plants would make quite a respectable show in any garden and further we do not believe that one half of our farmers can show as much. If a man is too poor to purchase this number of plants, let him order one half and make a beginning, and in two or three years he can have plants to sell or give away to his less fortunate neighbors.

FRIDAY MORNING MAY [illegible] 1870

Facts Against Theory

Instead of discussing the vital eighth resolution and preaching repudiation and compulsory disgorgement in the [illegible] style which it commenced with at the beginning of the campaign, the Herald is now devoting most of its space to prosy [illegible] tions on the tariff. It don't want any protection for American labor, says that laborers in America don't want any and that there is not a single article that the laborer uses whose price is not enhanced by the tariff either directly or indirectly. That is one view of the subject, but it happens not to be in accordance with fact. To prove that it is not let us look at the products of one of the most prominent branches of American industry. It is well known that the duty on woolen goods is now higher than it was some years ago. Yet it is an indisputable fact that woolen goods are cheaper in gold to-day than they were then. This is proven by comparative statements recently published by great importing and jobbing houses in New York and Boston, showing the prices of ten years ago and now. The explanation of this is that under the tariff the manufacture of woolen goods has been immensely expanded. Facilities for manufacture have been increased and the processes of manufacture have been greatly improved. The existence of the tariff has also caused a strong steady market for American woolens. Thus the competition of American manufacturers with each other has cheapened woolen fabrics. But without a tariff discriminating in favor of our own products, whereby foreign competition was measurably shut out until American manufactures could grow up and American goods could get possession of the market, we should still be dependent on foreign countries for the bulk of our woolen goods at such prices as they might choose to ask.

From this illustration in the case of one of our most prominent industries, it will be seen that high duties on an imported fabric do not necessarily insure high prices for domestic goods of the same kind. What is true of woolen goods is true of all other products of leading branches of manufacture. Free traders who discuss this subject on theory, have a most convenient way of ignoring facts.

Regrets His War Record

From what Mr. Nesmith said in his speech here the other night the inference was plain that he deeply regretted that he had adhered to the Union cause and assisted in his capacity of a Senator of the United States to carry on the war and put down the rebellion. He said plainly that he had been "gulled" into the position he occupied during the war, and that he had acted during that period under a misapprehension, thus leaving those who heard to infer that if he had his part to act over again he would take a very different course. But whether he would have been a secession sympathizer, a peace sneak, a virulent Copperhead, throwing every possible obstacle in the way of the Government and voting in his place in the Senate against every measure for the prosecution of the war, or an open rebel, going out of the Senate like Jeff. Davis and Breckinridge did, to fight against the country, he did not say. This much, however, could be understood, viz., that he regretted that he had been a Union man during the war, and that if it were to do over again he would either be a Copperhead or a rebel.

Mr. Nesmith plainly states that he was entrapped by the Republicans and "gulled" into being a loyal man during the war, but he wants his Democratic friends now to understand that he is very penitent and would never do so again. He hopes they will accept his apology, and, notwithstanding the sin of loyalty which he committed, receive him back into the party and make him Senator once more. Of course he is making speeches now merely to prepare the way to the Senate again, in case the Democrats should get the Legislature and there should be any complication among the friends of the rival candidates which could be taken advantage of. Therefore he wants it to be understood that whatever "errors" he might have committed in standing by the Union cause and opposing the rebellion, he has repented of them all, and is now as good a Democrat as the best peace shrieker or rebel among them.

Greenbacks and Repudiation

Some time ago,—so long ago that it has been almost forgotten,—Eastern Democrats started the idea of "paying the public debt by unlimited issues of greenbacks." This idea was run for awhile, but it could not stand the test of discussion and at last exploded. Nobody at the East thinks of starting it again. Even the most stolid of the bed-rock Democracy there have given it up. But in Oregon the idea is still adhered to. Mr Slater is making it a prominent feature in all his speeches. Even Mr Grover, who pretends to some knowledge of finance, and to some judgment as a man of business, sanctions it to a greater or less extent, according to the locality where he speaks. Greenbacks now are the especial object of "Democratic" admiration. But it was not so once. Even Pendleton himself argued at one time that Congress had no power to issue them. The Supreme Court has since affirmed the power of Congress on this subject as a measure of the war but has pronounced against further issues. When Pendleton was arguing against greenbacks in 1862, he said: "The currency will be expanded, prices will be inflated, fixed values will depreciate, incomes will be diminished, the savings of the poor will vanish, the hoardings of the widow will melt away, everything of fixed value will lose its value. What then? The day of reckoning will come. Private ruin and public bankruptcy either with or without repudiation will follow." Who can doubt that if the currency were inflated to the extent which these gentlemen of the greenback theory demand, the result predicted by Pendleton eight years ago would actually ensue? For certainly all present values would be destroyed and what would prevent bankruptcy from becoming general. Repudiation also would probably follow and this no doubt is what Mr Slater and his party are aiming at.

A while ago the Herald constructed many articles to prove that the west side railroad bill was a humbug and a swindle. But of late it has been making frantic efforts to prove that Mr Congressman Smith is the hero of the measure, and that he is entitled to the "honor" of passing the said humbug and swindle through the House. Ex Senator Nesmith also says that the bill is a humbug and swindle, but declares that if he had been in Congress he would have voted against it. All this is not very complimentary to Mr Smith.

The Spirit that Wins

Republicans of Oregon [illegible] a few days of the campaign remain. The success of either party in this election, which all admit will be very close, will depend in a large degree on the personal effort that is made. We believe that the Republican party of Oregon is now better organized than it ever was before. Let that organization [illegible] vigilant, active, energetic and [illegible]. Let Republicans [illegible] the polls and in [illegible], wherever there is a chance to make a point. Remember that [illegible] means [illegible] despised. It may be [illegible] that [illegible]. Complete organization whereby the strength of the party may be brought to bear advantageously, seconded by activity, vigilance, energy and determination, contributes in a powerful manner to success in all [illegible]. Every man has a work to do. Let none hang back, or like laggards perform their duty in a spiritless manner. Let every man go on guard. The hour calls for action. And let not the Republicans of Multnomah lag behind.

Editorial Notes

Grasshopper Jim concludes to retract his statement that Judge Deady wrote an article that appeared in the OREGONIAN. He says: "Come to think of it, we don't know how we came to accuse Judge Deady of writing it." We know how. The Grasshopper simply indulged his natural propensity when he made the accusation.

Bill Newby was down here again yesterday to get more of the sinews of war for Yamhill. Poor Bill is having a serious time of it. His imports are eating and drinking their heads off, and all for naught. It is stated that the retired artist in Indian vouchers was over in Yamhill from Salem last week, but could give Bill no encouragement.

A gentleman who heard the candidates for the gubernatorial chair speak at Eugene City says that Mr Grover's effort was a "powerful" one. He talked some about the public debt, then spoke of the Chinaman, expatiated at some length on greenbacks, then more Chinaman, declared that the liberties of the people were in danger and finally made an eloquent and touching allusion to the Chinaman's queue, and subsided.

Col Chapman has been trying for weeks to have his name taken from the Democratic ticket as candidate for County Surveyor, but can't succeed. He has sent one peremptory demand after another to have his name dropped, but the organ still persists in keeping it on the ticket. We don't see what the Colonel is to do unless he commences suit against the County Committee and the organ. Can't he stop them with an injunction?

Ex Senator Nesmith is making speeches throughout the State, in which he is very severe upon the arbitrary acts of the Republican party. We have shown several times that Mr Nesmith himself once did certain things that smacked very strongly of the "arbitrary" sort. For instance, he had a number of newspapers in this State suppressed in time of the rebellion. Can any one think of any act more arbitrary or dangerous to liberty than that?

The repudiators in Oregon who paraded the "eighth resolution" as the great petard which was to blow up the Republican party, have run away from it in affright, lest they should themselves be blown up by it. The powder boat at Fort Fisher was a splendid success compared with the results which this "great and vital measure," flourished in with such a brazen blare of trumpets, and menacing the immediate extinction of the Republican party, has dwindled to.

In his speech here the other night Mr Garfielde gave a history of the passage of the bill to allow the Northern Pacific Railroad Company to issue bonds secured by mortgage for the construction of the road and also to cause the main branch to pass down the Columbia river. The bill passed the Senate by a vote of forty to eleven, every Republican Senator voting for it, and every Democratic Senator, with but one exception, voting against it. The one Democratic Senator who voted for it was Mr Norton of Minnesota, and the interest of his State in the road was so strong that he could not vote otherwise and show himself at home again. In the House but two Democrats, Smith of Oregon and Wilson of Minnesota, (two States directly interested) voted for it. This is a little more of the record of the Democratic party on internal improvements.

Falsehood and Fraud

Mr. W W. Nelson, of Portland, is one of the persons whose names are appended to the purchased affidavit made by one "Joseph Reily," to the effect that certain men had engaged him (Reily) to hire men in Oregon to vote for Garfielde at Puget Sound and that he (Reily) had hired and taken to Puget Sound for that purpose certain men whose names are given. Mr Nelson says that so far as his name is concerned it was used without his authority or knowledge, that he was never hired to go to Washington Territory to vote or for any other purpose, and that he never was at Olympia in his life. His name was used in that connection fraudulently. The entire statement of Reily is probably a fabrication—as false in every respect as in the use of Mr. Nelson's name.

IDAHO TERRITORY

[From the Boise Statesman May 21.]

The World newspaper has changed hands, Mr J H Bowman having sold out his interest. The new proprietors announce that their hands are now loosened, and, "come weal or woe, the paper will be Democratic to the core."

At Summit Flat, the snow still lies to the depth of six to seven feet, and packed so hard that people travel over it without snow shoes. Water plenty for mining purposes.

[From the Avalanche May 21.]

Flattering reports come from the agricultural districts of Southern Idaho. The spring has been a fine one for the farmers and they have so far taken full advantage of it. The prospect is that the yield of products of the soil to the farmers the present season will be a large increase on that of any previous year in the Territory.

J [illegible] writes to the News from the Snake river mines that work generally has been suspended owing to the high water, which will probably last two months yet. There have been some very rich spots discovered, and more believed to exist, but they have, so far, proven to be very limited. There are but few claims yet struck which are regarded as of much importance. The owners of a great majority of the claims which were abandoned by reason of the high water do not intend to return to them again. The gold as yet discovered is confined to the river—none is found in any of the tributaries.

A friend at [illegible] writes us that the water had been so high in [illegible] Creek as to stop all work, but it has fallen so rapidly that the miners thought they could be able to resume operations last Monday. The high water had done no damage to flumes or other property as was reported. George Aukley has brought in a ditch on the bar above town, out of which the citizens are allowed the privilege of using water in case of fire. Two bands of sheep have lately arrived in Oro Grande so that, in spite of the high water, the people now enjoy their regular mutton chop and potpie. Several buildings are being erected and our correspondent thinks there will be lively times there this summer.

The Charleston Courier (Democratic) says: "At this moment South Carolina has but one organized party, which is the Radical party. The Democratic party, as a State party, is not in being."

LAST NIGHT'S DISPATCHES.

Further in Regard to Fenian Movements

[illegible], May 25.—Five hundred Canadian volunteers occupy the village at Fort Erie. The Express Companies have stopped the shipment of treasure by Canadian routes, and the Insurance Companies refuse to take risks on the Welland Canal. More Fenians are expected to night.

DETROIT, May 25.—The Fenian movements in this vicinity are conducted secretly. It is impossible to obtain any positively reliable intelligence. A movement in some direction is on foot. Less than one hundred men left the city last night and another detachment will probably go to night. The probable direction is toward Bay City.

TOPEKA, May 25.—Col Crosby of Gen Sheridan's staff has arrived at Fort Hayes from the Indian Territory. He reports that the Northern Indians have runners out asking the Cheyennes, Arapahoes, Kiowas and Comanches to join them in a general war. Indications are that they will be pretty successful.

The Fenians of San Francisco who affiliate with the O'Mahony and Savage wing of the Order, manifest an utter indifference as to the issue of the movement on Canada. A wagon loaded with wood was smashed just beyond the toll gate on the Silverton road yesterday.

We understand that the Oregon and California Railroad Company design building a large and valuable ferry boat for the Wallamet at this point.

The man Louis Hale, injured in the spine by a fall at East Portland on Wednesday, was still alive last evening.

THE REAL ESTATE MARKET. The Oregon Real Estate Gazette for June, by Russell & Ferry of this city, thus quotes the market for real estate: There is considerable inquiry for outside city property for homesteads by persons living in the interior towns, and we have to report several sales of that character within the past week. Also a number of five and ten acre lots adjoining East Portland for homestead and speculative purposes. There is considerable inquiry for farming lands by emigrants, but as yet the transactions have been limited compared to the number arriving. The majority of emigrants are acting as agents for large numbers who have remained behind until lands have been selected and reported upon. The emigrant having so recently passed through the parched fields of California are highly delighted with the green fields and never-failing crops of the Willamette valley. There has been several sales of valuable homestead property in the city. The Oregon and California Railroad Company have purchased twenty acres of land adjoining their shops on the Tibbetts claim, adjoining the East Portland town site, to accommodate the increasing demand for room in building the large number of cars now in course of construction.

THE WALLAMET VALLEY.—We protest against any Oregon paper publishing erroneous statements regarding the Wallamet Valley. The Albany Register of May 7th states that the valley is from ten to 40 miles in width, and is 80 miles long. This has been copied into a local real estate agents journal for gratuitous circulation, and it is erroneous. The average width of the Wallamet Valley is not a rood less than fifty miles. The length is over 140 miles by actual [illegible] The same article estimates the [illegible] at 40,000 while it is really nearly [illegible] The same article, classing timber, [illegible] consists of white, red and yellow fir, implying that they are the only varieties we have, while in point of fact it is but a small portion of the [illegible] species of timber and is inferior to some other qualities. While people in the East [illegible] evince a desire for information respecting Oregon, let us be particular to give them such as we have to give correctly.

IMPROVING THE RECORDS.—Not long since the [illegible] was surprised by a statement of facts concerning the manner in which the records of Umatilla county have been kept under Democratic rule. We observe that the county officials up there have ordered a fine lot of Record books, and the same having been filled at the bindery here will be forwarded immediately. These officials desire perhaps to turn the books over to the Republicans in as good condition as possible. We are glad to note this intimation of better things in Umatilla county.

SOBERED UP.—We are informed that a party of surveyors from this city found a man in the vicinity of Nehalem valley, twelve miles from West [illegible], who had strayed away in a fit of delirium [illegible] and had subsisted thirty six days in the woods with nothing to eat all that time but one small animal which he had killed. We believe he was sober when found. If men will persist in having the tremens they must take their chances.

I. O. G. T.—On Monday last C Beal organized Rota Lodge No 129. The officers are: B M Hayden W C T; Mary Beckett W V T; J. Richardson W [illegible]; C Waller W F S; [illegible] Ingalls W T; James Chitwood W M; G. Waller W I G; J Mason W O G; J [illegible]ardson R [illegible]; B Pumpelly L [illegible]; T O Waller W C; W Montgomery W A S; A Ingalls W D M; D D Prettyman P W C T; W D Cole L D.

LABOR EXCHANGE. Three applications for employment were made yesterday, as follows: 1 farm hand, 1 teamster, 1 girl. Persons in search of help at any time of any class would do well to drop a request to C [illegible] John M Drake, Secretary of the Labor Exchange, Portland, Oregon. The Association makes no charge for any business it transacts. Funds for its support are obtained by private subscription.

PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.—The Philharmonic Society closes its season's rehearsals and exercises this evening. This is now one of the fixed Societies of Portland. The organization dates February 2d 1868. The membership is at this time eighty, about equally divided between gentlemen and ladies. Mr S J McCormick, of the Franklin Book Store, is President of the Society.

A MISTAKE.—We were in error yesterday in stating that the [illegible] had been laid up at the Company's ship yard. She took the colt and his keeper up to the Cascades, and we now understand will land them and the balance of the stock at that movement at M[illegible] to day and will then return here to [illegible] business in the Monticello trade on Monday next.

POLITICAL. We [illegible] last evening that the steamer [illegible] would leave the American Exchange wharf to day at 10 o'clock punctually [illegible] convey the county candidates to Sauvie's Island [illegible] in attendance here at the speaking to day. We will be thankful to our political [illegible] if they would be [illegible] of their [illegible]

STOCKHOLDERS MEETING. The subscribers to the capital stock of the Willamette [illegible] Association met at the [illegible] last evening and [illegible] a Board of Directors [illegible] the R. A. White building [illegible] business therein as [illegible] incorporation.

FIRE ALARM. [illegible] smith's forge in [illegible] M Hay on Front street, at the foot of Jefferson, [illegible] It was discovered [illegible] a tub full of water [illegible] and the Department were [illegible] almost a man—but their services were not required. No damages.

NO. 4's HOUSE.—Perry [illegible] has about completed excavating for the basement of the new engine house for Protection Company No 4. Work on the foundation will begin on Monday by the contractor Mr W H Brackett. This will be about as desirable as any property the city now has in possession.

Virginia in the Future

(From the N. Y. [illegible])

So far as we can learn no part of the [illegible] now in the enjoyment of more perfect peace, order and general [illegible] than the State of Virginia. And such has been her condition for more than a year past. Three bugaboo stories from her soil have reached us by telegraph within the past three months—one of them giving a horrible account of the torturing to death of a small boy by a negro who suspected him of stealing some money he had lost—a fabrication which was promptly and utterly exploded; 2. A collision between a sheriff's posse and some negroes who refused to yield possession of a tract of land on which they had been located by Military authority—which seems to have been peaceably adjusted. The collision of authority between the rival pretenders to the Mayoralty of Richmond—which they at last referred to the arbitrament of the Courts as they should have done at first. There are doubtless some bad and many shiftless fellows among them, but take them altogether we venture to say that there have been fewer felonies, fewer outrages committed in the whole State of Virginia during the last twelve months than in a single Congressional district of this city.

And—better yet—the great body of the people of Virginia seem cured of that intense absorption in politics which was so long a madness in their blood. They no longer assemble in their court houses and cross roads to be harangued by the day on State Rights, Consolidation, Federal Usurpation, the Resolutions of '98, &c. &c., as their fathers and grandfathers took a strange pleasure in doing; but they are generally intent on completing railroads, planting fruit trees, opening mines, buying gypsum, clover seed, choice breeding animals, &c. &c. Their agriculture is still in the main primitive, but the lessons of last year's desolating drouth have not been thrown away. Most of her arable soil is still plowed too shallowly and hardly fertilized at all; but there will be more and more good farming done in Virginia each year until she shall have become what she ought to be—the best tilled and (apart from her great cities) most productive and populous State in the Union.

And prospective buyers of her lands are pouring in upon her as never before. We estimate that the area of the soil sold to strangers since this year opened is at least ten times that of any former year. Some are buying for colonies; some to sell again; many intending to keep a part and sell off the residue to others for their future homes. A number of Englishmen have bought for themselves and their friends—each expecting to be followed to his chosen home by scores of his countrymen. The mild climate, the abundant and excellent timber, the immense deposits of coal and iron, the admirable blending of hill and dale, mountain and valley, field and forest, render Virginia especially inviting to these English farmers who choose to remove their families and their means to the soil of the New World. Nowhere else in America does the British farmer feel so much at home as on the soil of the State whose foundations were laid by Britons before the Rock of Plymouth was discovered or the right angles of Philadelphia were projected.

And though some estates have been sold to firm holders, the area for sale at low prices in Virginia to-day exceeds that of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut all together. The plantation system went out with Slavery, leaving the patriarchs with hundreds and thousands of acres each which they can only turn to profit by selling. Most of them are in debt—many of them heavily burdened and sharply pressed, so that their lands, though more salable than hitherto since 1860, may still be bought amazingly cheap. We judge that there are millions of acres in the State that are offered for less than the net proceeds of their timber, after paying the expense of cutting, transporting and selling it, leaving the land a clear profit to the buyer.

And Virginia is no untrodden wilderness. The last Indian abandoned her soil nearly a century ago. Her people have in the main been Americans for five or six generations. Her Capital is but five hours' distant from that of the United States; half her population live within ten hours' ride of the Federal Metropolis. Her Potomac, James and Roanoke are among the largest and finest rivers that descend from the Alleghanies to the Atlantic; her bays, estuaries and harbors are unsurpassed; the apple, the grape and the peach find her soil and climate most genial; her innumerable upland streams are equally adapted to impel machinery and irrigate her fields; and, in short—now that Slavery is dead and her people practically a unit for universal amnesty and impartial suffrage—she is evidently entering upon a career of rapid growth and unprecedented prosperity. She has less than a million and a half of people to-day; we shall be sorely disappointed if she does not return three millions in 1880 and six millions in 1900.

Wordsworth's Poetry.—It will never be popular; that is to say, it will never be read as Tennyson is read. You need no eye but an eye for the picturesque, no soul but a soul for the strong passions of our nature, to read Marmion, Childe Harold, the Corsair, and the Idyls of the King; but to read Wordsworth you must be yourself a poet in all but words. Take the White Doe of Rylstone. To read that, you must send the soul in upon herself; you must think nothing of Scott, or how Scott would have worked up a legend of description; you must think less of Byron. "It starts from a high point of imagination," as Wordsworth said, criticising the poem toward the close of his career, when he had ceased to think of literary fame except as the dream of his youth to be realized, if at all, two or three generations hence, "and comes round through various windings of that faculty, to a still higher—nothing less than the hypothesis of the animal who gives the first of the two titles to the poem." And as the poem thus begins and ends with pure and lofty imagination, every motive and impetus that actuates the person introduced is from the same source—a kindred spirit pervades and is intended to harmonize the whole. Throughout, objects (the banner, for instance) derive their influence not from properties inherent in them, not from what they are actually in themselves, but from such as are bestowed upon them by the minds of those who are conversant with or affected by those objects. Thus the poetry, if there be any in the work, proceeds as it ought to do, from the soul of man communicating its creative energies to the images of the external world. Of course this is not the sort of poem to be taken up and read in a careless way after dinner, like Scott's or Byron's. It is a poem to be studied as a work of thought and a work of art; but those who read Wordsworth in this spirit make his poetry part of their nature, rank him with Milton and Shakspeare, and speak of his genius with the deepest reverence and affection.

These of course are and always will be a narrow and select circle of readers. Wordsworth's poetry is, and probably always will be, caviare to the multitude. All his poems taken together, his Lyrics, his Prelude, his Borderers, his White Doe of Rylstone, and his excursion, did not bring him in the long course of his life what Scott and Byron received for the worst of theirs. "The whole of my returns," he says, writing to his friend Archdeacon Wrangham, "I do not say net profits, but returns from the writing trade, do not amount to seven score pounds; and except Milton selling his manuscript of Paradise Lost for the price of a newspaper article, I know nothing more touching in the history of literature than Wordsworth's reflection toward the close of his career: "I have labored hard through a long life without more pecuniary emolument than a lawyer gets for two special retainers, or a public performer sometimes for two or three songs." Yet this was Wordsworth knew was the price he must pay for immortality, if he wished to base his chances of enduring fame on a theory of poetry so high that the criticism of his own day could not rise to it. He never flinched from the terms of his bargain. His ambition was to be either considered a teacher or to be nothing, and that ambition after a struggle he has realized. He met the scorn of critics with scorn. He had but one answer for his assailants: "I at the age of nineteen to love two hundred years hence; I shall continue to write to the last; the light of heaven upon me." But that was enough. His genius has vindicated itself, and the immortality he looked for is his.

Help for the Miserable

No wonder that the face of the dyspeptic has a dragged worn, hopeless expression that is pitiful to see. No wonder that the miserable martyr to indigestion is fretful, irritable and unsocial. Whoever can bear the pangs of this tormenting complaint cheerfully and with an unruffled temper is little short of a saint. But why should human fortitude continue to be thus severely tried when an absolute specific for the disease is always at hand? Everywhere within the limits of civilization in this hemisphere Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is obtainable, and the history of the first case of dyspepsia in which it has been administered in vain has yet to be written. The sickness at the stomach, the sense of weakness and stupor, the feeling of emptiness and hollowness before eating, and of oppression afterwards, the fluttering of the pulse, the intense nervous irritation, the morbid indisposition to exertion, the weariness of life and indifference to its pleasures, which are among the symptoms of the disease in its chronic form, are rapidly ameliorated by the tonic operation of this palatable vegetable restorative, which seems to renovate and quicken all the dormant forces of the system and rouse the mind from the apathy and gloom inseparable from a derangement of the digestive and secretive functions. In ordinary cases a few weeks suffices to complete the cure, but when the disease is complicated with torpidity of the liver, severe constipation, impurity of the blood and a sluggish circulation, a longer time may be required. Persevere, however, and the result is certain. An encouraging improvement will be perceptible from day to day, and the convalescent will know, by his or her feelings, that he or she is on the high road to health. [illegible] will await the happy issue with comparative patience.

The undersigned who has always enjoyed public confidence [illegible] of his Coffee neglects nothing to justify the favor so acquired by his productions, the sale of which daily increases. The acknowledged superiority of his merchandise, which commands here and in the markets of the interior a relatively higher price, excites the cupidity of some manufacturers, and every day he sees increasing the number of those who, by counterfeit or imitation of his mark, seek to deceive the public, palming upon it as their inferior productions for the genuine G VENARD CHARTRES COFFEE. This fraud [illegible] perceived by everybody after a trial, but only adds to the fair [illegible] the consumers, the very flattering though [illegible] testimony of the counterfeiters. Nevertheless buyers should be forewarned and placed on their guard against this practice.

Letter from Japan

[illegible] Correspondence of the Mountaineer

Yokohama, April 1, 1870

FRIEND HAS — According to promise here goes. Arrived here on the 2[illegible]th of March, twenty four days from San Francisco. Our entire passage was one continuation of pleasure, the broad Pacific being as smooth as a lake of quicksilver, and our magnificent steamer floated like a duck upon its surface, with so little motion that seasickness was an impossibility; all was enjoyment throughout the entire passage.

Our commander, J. H. Fr[illegible], [illegible] officers were perfect gentlemen, and [illegible] comfort and amusement was devised that made our voyage and time pass as pleasantly as possible. Our bill of fare was most excellent, and kept up through our entire passage, and everything in the culinary department was kept so neat and clean that it would put to shame the aristocratic hotels of San Francisco. Everything and every department was closely inspected every day. Quoits, ball, gymnasium exercises, music, dancing, whist, cribbage, chess and tricks of legerdemain by Prof. Costerado were a few of the amusements of the day. Thus the time passed quickly and pleasantly away. At daylight on the morning of the 26th of March land was sighted which proved to be a part of the great Japanese Empire, and by noon we passed the lighthouse at Cape King and were steaming up the grand and noble bay of Yedo, passing our steam frigate Delaware, which was at anchor near the spot where a few weeks since the American man-of-war Oneida and one hundred and twelve of her officers and crew had found a watery grave. We passed proudly on and at 5 o'clock P. M. made fast to the company's buoy in the center of one vast crowd of shipping of all nations of the globe. In a short time our noble steamer was crowded with the San Pans (boatmen) peculiar to the country, and such a noise and confusion as they made, words can hardly describe.

The flags of the different Ministers and Consuls were readily seen at a distance before we penetrated the shipping. Among them we noticed our glorious American ensign proudly floating above all others. This was the one grand object of our attention, and in a few moments after landing we were in the presence of our old friend and fellow townsman, Captain Lyon and family. After receiving a joyous and happy greeting from one and all, we sat down and had a jolly talk. We were sorry to learn that the Consul had been seriously ill for some three weeks past, but we are pleased to say that he is now slowly recovering. His sickness was over exertion attending to his numerous duties. There is no port in China or Japan where the duties of the American Consul are so arduous as at Yokohama, owing to the vast amount of shipping constantly arriving and leaving. There are now in port one hundred and eight vessels of all nations, the most of them having been freighted with rice and sugar from China. This has been a great source of trade for the past year, the crops of this country having failed. There came very near being a famine, but as there was a large surplus in China of the necessaries of life, their wants were soon relieved from that source.

The only exports from these islands are silks, teas and curiosities. The Japanese are a very ingenious and energetic class of people, and are fast imitating the Europeans. They now own ten or twelve steamers purchased from Americans and English. Most of them are commanded by Japanese captains, crews and engineers, which do very well until something happens to the machinery, and then the jig is up and they have to employ Europeans to start it again for them.

The country is now at peace and all is quiet again, but how long it will remain so is a case of quien sabe, as it is to the interest of the foreigners to keep the government constantly at variance and revolutionized, then they step in and reap the benefits caused by the confusion of war.

As regards the climate, I can't say anything of it very flattering, as it has rained nearly every day since we arrived, and it has also been quite cold, making coal fires necessary to comfort. The winters are said to be the pleasantest part of the season.

The streets are all macadamized and kept clean and in good repair. Stages leave here twice a day for the great city of Yedo, distant twelve miles, with a turnpike road all the way.

Yokohama and Kanagawa are both one and the same, only separated by a canal, which also partially separates the foreigners from the Japs.

The country is said to be rich in the precious minerals of gold, silver, copper, cinnabar, and also in coal. The gold mines are said to be fabulously rich. They are owned by the Mikado and princes of the country, who are now just beginning to open their eyes to the necessity of employing experienced European miners to open and develop the mineral resources of their country, which has long laid hidden in the bowels of the earth. Mr. Farrington, Private Secretary to the United States Minister, Mr. De Long, has just succeeded in contracting with one of the rich Damaris to superintend the working of a silver mine at Hiogo. I have also in view a similar contract for the working of a rich gold mine over near the famous mountain of Fusiama, whose snow capped peak (much like our Mount Hood) can be seen of a clear day towering its lofty head far above the ranges of high lands one hundred miles distant. At times it is an active volcano. The Japs worship and reverence this beautiful landmark.

Much of this island has a volcanic appearance and is now subject to frequent earthquakes. I have already experienced three since my arrival, and there is no knowing at what time the inhabitants of Yokohama may have to flee to the high lands back of the town three-fourths of a mile, as a tidal wave would go over the top of the highest house, the ground being so low upon which the city is built and surround by water. Great would be the loss of life if such a misfortune should occur.

In regard to the Press. There is one French and three English papers published here. As the American population is very small it would not pay to publish a paper in their interest.

The contemplated railroad will probably be commenced as soon as the engineers arrive from Europe.

The Japanese and China characters are the same, still they cannot understand one another in conversation, as their dialect is as much different as English and German. The Japanese is much the easiest to acquire. Many of the Europeans here speak it very fluently.

Horses are numerous, but very small, about the size of our Cayuse ponies. They are all stallions and very vicious, valued at from $40 to $50 a piece. There are several trucks and drays in the city introduced from California, but most of the hauling is done by Coolies with a two wheeled truck, the wheels made of solid wood. Four Coolies will haul a ton of stone. The constant music they keep up while hauling their heavy loads through the streets is stunning to a stranger, and requires some time to get accustomed to it. Many of the poorer class of Coolies have [illegible] but what kind nature has furnished them. At first our modesty was slightly shocked, but we soon got used to this as many of their other customs.

The English Flying Squadron, comprising six vessels of war, arrived here a few days ago, and some eighteen hundred men have been sent on shore on liberty for several days past. A constant stream of sailors loaded down with boxes of Japanese curiosities have passed the Consulate from morn till night, making a good business for the Japanese and shop-keepers.

At night the business houses and shops are closed and all is quiet, save the watchman and patrol on guard; not a person of this densely crowded city can be seen in the streets. At daylight a change comes over the scene, and all is hurry and bustle like a swarm of bees. Marketing commences at daylight and closes at noon. It is held in an open [illegible] ground with no covering but the canopy of heaven, and mud under feet at least six inches deep. This makes marketing for an European anything but pleasing. The market consists of a great variety of vegetables, fish, crabs, oysters, clams and China pottery, all in abundance. Beef is very tender, sweet and scarce. The other meats are imported from China and are consequently high. Fruit at this season of the year is very scarce, [illegible] the Japs don't raise much fruit at any time, and the foreigners have to depend on China for a variety. Even what little they have is picked before it is ripe, so as to get it into market as early as possible.

Churches there are three: Congregational, Church of England and Catholic. Connected with the Congregational Church, as at The Dalles, they have a good Sabbath School. The Japs [illegible] [illegible] also an emblem of nationality, and is [illegible] [illegible] their national [illegible] [illegible] to the Christian religion, and [illegible] [illegible] which eventually will [illegible].

The tea trade for this season is about over, but will commence again in July, when the new tea comes in. As soon as I can ascertain the modus operandi of curing teas I will give you the benefit. All imports and exports pay a duty of [illegible] per cent to the Japanese government.

In a few days I expect to take a trip some one hundred miles in the interior, and I will write you [illegible].

Yours truly,
KAUGHLIN

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

PORTLAND, Thursday, May 26, 1870.

The gold quotation of to-day at New York is 114¼, same as yesterday.

Portland Legal Tender rates are 8[illegible]c buying and 88a 84½c selling.

Money matters remain very much as for the last week. There are some small amounts of dust coming down from the mines, but it is [illegible] too early to expect large receipts. Advices [illegible] regard to the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] all [illegible] favorable [illegible] [illegible] considerable impetus to business beyond what [illegible]. [illegible] rates of interest are without any particular change—at bank 1 per cent [illegible] 30 and 90 day [illegible] [illegible] per month [illegible] on long loans on good security at a little less.

There is a large disproportion of silver coin in the circulation, small gold being scarce and legal tenders in rather short supply. Silver has all along passed at par on this coast. In New York, as compared with gold, silver is at a discount. Small gold coin has consequently been drawn in considerable quantities from the Pacific to the Atlantic to be exchanged for silver [illegible]. During the time when gold was at a high premium the silver coin of the United States nearly all disappeared, going into Canada. Becoming in that country in large excess and being regarded as a nuisance, [illegible] the Canadians seized the opportunity when gold ran down to [illegible] to start the flow of silver back into the United States. Hence the late large supply in New York and other States, the resumption of silver payments in change, and the excessive disproportion of silver to all other money in circulation on the Pacific coast.

The business of the week in commercial circles has been, in the aggregate, quite satisfactory. The number of buyers upon the market is perhaps as great as at any time during the year, and certainly greater than during the corresponding period of last year. AGRICULTURAL GOODS—the market has shown considerable improvement during the week, sales foot up at very fair figures, and some classes of goods have gone off largely. We notice several Sweepstakes and Challenger threshers bound up the valley, but Mowers and Headers as yet lead the market. The stocks of the latter class of machines are quite limited and prices are very firm. DRY GOODS—We have to [illegible] a marked improvement in this market. There are quite a number of buyers in town from the Willamette and also from Eastern Oregon, who are laying in fair stocks. No changes are notable in quotations. HARDWARE—A moderate activity has prevailed in this line during the week, sales to the upper Columbia country being large for the season. There are buyers from Lewiston, Stikeen mines and several points near the Idaho border. Trade to these sections is visibly increasing. The first shipment of iron for the Idaho Penitentiary at Boise City started to-day. Nails, cordage and shovels have an upward tendency, as have several other staple articles of hardware, but we quote no advance in prices as yet, dealers being determined to offer every possible inducement to interior buyers. GROCERIES—In this line there has been a good trade during the week. We have already noted the advance in syrups and sugars; to-day we give the quotations revised. There is an upward tendency in most all staple articles.

PRODUCE—There is little to be said in regard to this market beyond the general statement that everything is dull, and the indications are that present prices for flour, grain, bacon, etc., must soon give way.
